Grow a Salad on Your Windowsill: Starting Seeds Indoors This Fall (Beginner Guide)

DESCRIPTION · 468 CHARS

You can grow a salad on your windowsill this fall with one shallow tray, a bag of seed-starting mix and a sunny spot. This beginner guide covers the four easiest crops to start indoors, how deep to sow, why you water from below and how to keep leggy seedlings from flopping over. Pea shoots are ready to snip in a few weeks, and lettuce follows soon after. Read the full guide and start your first tray this weekend. #indoorgardening #windowsillgarden #growyourownfood

Your windowsill is a garden you haven't planted yet.

One shallow tray. Pea shoots, arugula, a bit of lettuce. Water from underneath, turn it every morning, and in a few weeks you're snipping a salad in your socks in November.

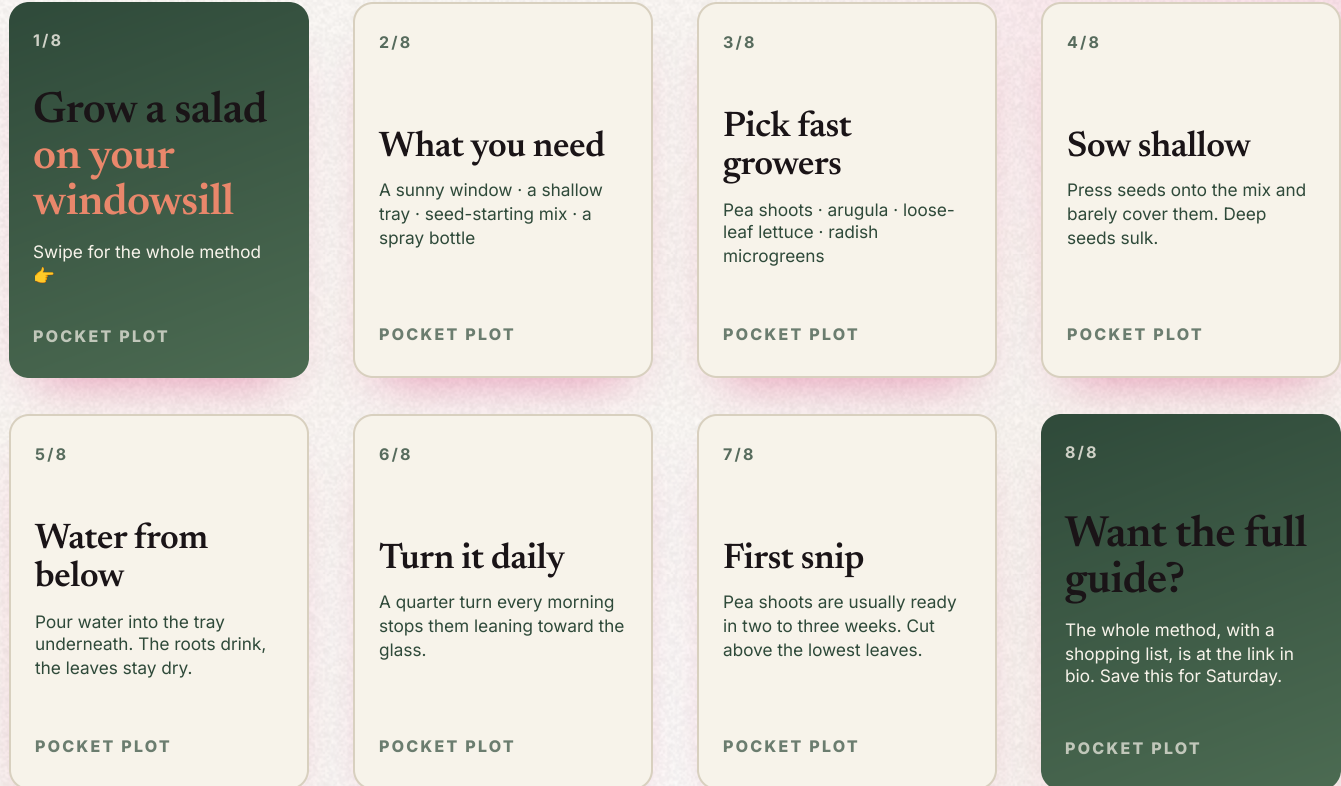

I wrote the whole method up this week. Link in the reply.

ASSET 11 OF 24 · THE CAROUSEL

Eight slides, one idea each.

Built to be saved. The first slide makes the promise, the middle slides teach one step each, and the last slide sends her to the full guide through the link in bio.

CAPTION

Your garden's done for the year. Your windowsill isn't 🌱

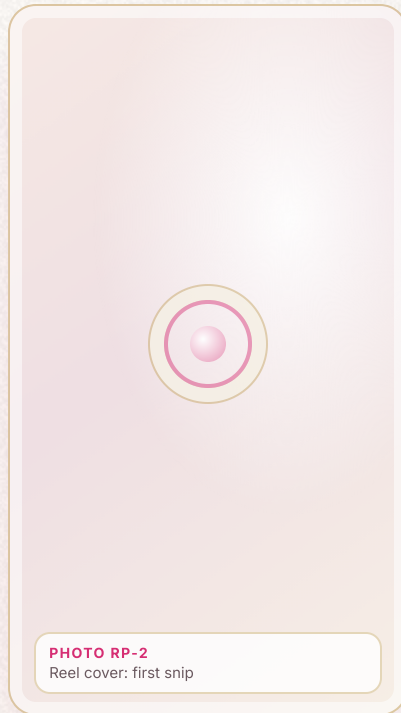

Save this for the weekend, grab a shallow tray and start with pea shoots. They're the fastest win.

The full guide, with a shopping list, is at the link in bio.

CAPTION

It's November and I'm still harvesting 🥬

One tray on a sunny windowsill: pea shoots, arugula, a bit of lettuce. Water from below and turn it every morning.

The full method is at the link in bio.

FOOTAGE

Filmed on June's phone from a one-page shot list sent with the pack. Every clip is 2 to 6 seconds, so the edit is quick.

Raise your hand if your garden is finished for the year but you're not 🙋

You can keep growing all winter on a sunny windowsill. One shallow tray, some seed-starting mix and the right seeds (pea shoots, arugula, loose lettuce, radish microgreens).

The two tricks that make it work: water from underneath and give the tray a quarter turn every morning.

I put the whole method, with a shopping list, into this week's guide. It's in the comments 📌

WHAT IT ASKS FOR

One thing: read the guide. The opening line gets the hands up, the middle gives two real tips, the close points down.

Subject: Your windowsill is a garden

Preview: One tray, four seeds, salad by Thanksgiving-ish.

Hi friend,

The beds are put to bed. The garlic's in. And I am already restless.

So this week I did what I do every November: I turned the kitchen windowsill into a tiny salad farm. It takes one shallow tray and about ten minutes to start.

Here's the short version:

- Pick fast growers: pea shoots, arugula, loose-leaf lettuce, radish microgreens
- Sow shallow, barely covered
- Water from below, never on the leaves
- Give the tray a quarter turn every morning

That's honestly most of it. The rest (the shopping list, how to stop leggy seedlings, when to cut) is in the full guide.

Read the windowsill salad guide

If you start a tray, hit reply and tell me what you planted. I read every one.

Happy growing,
June

ONE ASK

Read the guide. The link sits on the words of the button, and the same link goes on "full guide" earlier in the email.
